Vol. II. WINTER PARK, FLORIDA, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1888. No. 7.

CONTENT vs. DISCONTENT.

[TRUE EXTERIOR.]

One, satisfied with what most he had, —
 "I was not a corner lot, — serenely meant
 Never to wander from her little cot,
 Made beautiful by wise and sweet content.

And one, dissatisfied with all he had, [white],
 Roved from his place into the world's mad
 What ill he had? Well, it was not so bad, —
 The fellow found that cottage and that girl.
 —I. W. R.

DISCONTENTED JOHN MADE HAPPY.

The above typifies very well the fate of dreaming John, whose discontent and wandering from home we followed last week. He found fair Florida, contented with her lot, dwelling in peace beneath the winter's sun. What wonder if he fell in love with her at first sight, and pressed his acquaintance until, fairly folded in her arms at Winter Park, he resolved to make her his own.

After we left him at Padatka last week, he came up to Sanford, not having seen a very big display from Orange county at the Sub-Tropical, and prepared to find little of consequence here. He found at Sanford a fair city growing like a mushroom from the ashes of the old pioneer town, and just on its edge a show of the products, resources and business of this section of the State, that astonished him, in its proportion, quite as much as the Sub-Tropical had done. There he had found the whole State represented, and here he found a section of it which was of importance enough, and had resources enough to get up an exhibition of its own. Pursuing the same plan as at the Sub-Tropical, he very soon saw enough at the exhibition, and by visiting some of the principal places represented, to convince him that this section, far enough south to escape the disadvantages of the northern parts of the State, and yet not beyond civilization, was the place for him to locate. At Orlando he found another flourishing city, larger than Sanford, and between the two, within reach of both, he found Winter Park, set like a gem in the midst of her lakes and groves. He is now resting at the Seminole, and thinks he has got so near the top round of the ladder, that if there is anything any higher up, the difference must be so slight, that it is not worth the trouble of hunting up the place. He already has his eye on a piece of pine woods here, that he knows from what he sees on all sides can be made to blossom like the rose, and he proposes to try it. He will not settle here permanently this winter, but will stay long enough to escape the dirty weather of March and April at the North, and use the time to get his place here cleared up and fairly under cultivation. Next summer he will return home, leaving his place here in charge of some one of our skillful managers, and if he has a right good chance to settle up his affairs, we expect to see him down here, bag and baggage, as soon as cold weather reminds him of us again. By that time he will have had a house built here, and when he finds himself snugly ensconced in his arm chair, by his own fireside, surrounded by his family and the friends he is now making, he will hardly want to pull up stakes for another move. His trees and ornamental plants and lawns will by that time be just fairly started, too, and he can certainly do much better with them if he stays and gives them his daily attention the next summer. Then Florida will have won him for her own, and he will be content to remain here to enjoy the rest of his life under her smiling skies. Thousands have followed the same course before, and are happy in their new homes; why should not he do us well?

WINTER PARK.

That this most delightful winter resort is appreciated and recognized as one of the brightest and most beautiful spots in Florida there is no shadow of doubt, and could a stranger take a glance within the spacious and well filled halls of the elegant Seminole, with its 350 guests, made up of the best society of both men and women from every State in the Union as well as from lands beyond the sea. I am very sure that there are many who might be pardoned at least the natural feeling of envy, for such society as is found here is that which in more than one sense becomes the great educator of the people that come in contact with it, and largely molds their lives and habits in both moral and political views; that shapes and clothes society in its best light and colors, blending together in more perfect harmony the great panorama of human existence.

Let us take a casual glance into the great parlor on Sunday evening last. Here we find a picture delightful to look upon and enjoy; no conventionality, but a blending together of strange hearts, in songs of thanksgiving to that God and Creator of all things, who in his great love and mercy has given us such a climate of sunshine and flowers, as to make such a gathering possible, not only here but throughout the entire State. It was fitting, therefore, that the guests of the Seminole should assemble, and in the glorious melodies of old Corontion, Antioch, Bethany, and others, offer up their songs of praise and rejoicing. It was a most beautiful sight to note the freedom from all thoughts of wealth or aristocratic proclivities in such an audience. Prominent among those the writer noticed, who joined in the singing, were

LOCHMEDE

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Plant, Mrs. Geo. M. Pullman and daughter, the latter kindly presiding at the piano, Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Knowles, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clute and niece of Minneapolis, Mr. J. H. Lee and daughters of Boston, one of whom added her most charming voice, full of rare sweetness and of wonderfully fine compass, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson and daughter of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Reed and daughter (Mrs. Hester) of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Adams and daughter of Philadelphia, Mr. Loring A. Chase of Boston, one of Winter Park's pioneers and enterprising spirits, Mrs. Geo. Fuller and son of Portland, Me., Miss Eaton, Mr. Richard Cheenery and family of Belfast, Me., Mr. James M. Brookfield, three daughters and son-in-law of Brooklyn, N. Y., and many other distinguished ladies and gentlemen whom we do not recall. I say, with such a distinguished gathering within the halls of this magnificent Seminoles, and with the perfect system in all its appointments, under the management of Messrs. Forbes and Page, it is not strange that it has become so famous as one of the brightest locations in all Florida. What the famous Glen House is to the White Mountains of New Hampshire, as a summer resort, the Seminoles is to South Florida, as a winter resort, and another as attractive as this will be greatly needed in the near future. Winter Park is yet in its infancy, and its future must and will develop into large proportions, for there are today more tourists en route to this particular section of South Florida, than ever known before, and the coming of President Cleveland and his beautiful and accomplished wife to Jacksonville, on the 22nd inst., will help swell the great throng that is now pouring into sunny Florida. The orchestra of six pieces, under the leadership of Mr. Eastman, discourses very sweet music, which lends a charm to sorrow's law, and adds very much to the pleasure and enjoyment of the Seminoles.

A world of brightness centers here;
The glories God has given
Are but the real stars to guide
Our willing steps to Heaven.
There is but one Florida, whose brightness, glory and grandeur shall very shortly kiss the world, and whose influence shall mold and keep in safety the government founded by our fathers, "an Union of States, one and inseparable."

WHEELLOCK.

The Tunnel at Libby Prison.

The March Century will contain the story of "Col. Rose's Tunnel at Libby Prison," told by one of the one hundred and nine Union officers who escaped on the night of February 9, 1864. The successful construction of this tunnel, dug from a dark corner of the cellar of the prison, through fifty feet of solid earth,—the only tools being two broken chisels and a wooden spittoon in which to carry out the dirt,—was one of the most remarkable incidents of the war.
Col. Rose, to whose indomitable will and perseverance the success of the scheme was due, is now a captain in the 16th United States Infantry, and of the fourteen men who assisted him in digging the tunnel, eleven are still living. The narrative in the March Century, which is illustrated, forms one of the untechnical papers supplementing the War Series, and is said to be one of the most romantic records that the Century has ever printed.

A new, cheap and effective insect killer is said to be composed of one part muriate of potash, in one thousand parts of water.

California vs. Florida.

A man who had lived three years in Florida, and thought to better himself by going to California, writes thus from Los Angeles county:

You will see by this letter that I am in southern California. I thought by what you wrote me when I was in Chicago, that it would not be best for me to go to Florida, if I depended upon getting work at my trade, and as California was having a boom, I came out here, and found work to be plenty. Times are a little dull here just at present, but think they will revive soon. It has been freezing here quite hard for the last week, but it is changed to be colder here this winter than it has been for years. Oranges don't appear to have been injured yet; very few have been gathered yet in this locality. Orange groves are numerous here, but I have failed to find any oranges that will compare with Florida oranges. I have sampled many, and find them all about the same thing. The trees are mostly grafted, but are not so thrifty as in Florida, and many groves are being ruined by scale bugs, and there seems to be no remedy for them here.

There was a great rush to this State last fall, and real estate has doubled and tripled in some localities. A man must have thousands of dollars if he wishes to buy real estate here. In short, this is no place for a poor man, unless he has a trade. They have what they call cheap acre land—only $100 to $150 per acre. Many people are disappointed by coming here. I think Florida is far ahead of this State for any one wishing to make a home; coal, for instance, is $23 per ton, wood $20 per cord, and both have been very useful here for the past two weeks. Much building is being done here now, new towns are starting up, but the boom is believed to last sooner or later and many are bound to get dumped.—Car. Florida Dispatch.

Dr. Henry Foster, at Lake Charm, near Ovieta, will realize almost $15,000 net for fruit from his Gee Hammock grove of 20 acres, and several thousands from his other groves at Lake Charm. The Gee Hammock grove is only about ten years old. In the face of these facts, can any one say that orange culture is not profitable? There are but few, and probably no other investments, that can be more profitable than a judiciously managed orange grove in Florida. Dr. Foster shipped a car-load of oranges to Liverpool, England, and has just heard from the same. The returns were exceedingly satisfactory, and it is thought that a great many oranges will be shipped there by the Ovieta growers, next season.—Florida Dispatch.

WINTER PARK, FEB. 17, 1888.

Go to the South Florida Exhibition at Sanford. Go early. Go often. Take your wife and children. There is something there for all.

The failure of the Town Improvement Association is a forcible illustration of the familiar maxim that in union there is strength, or rather of the converse proposition, that in division there is weakness. We hope soon to see a new organization formed for the same purposes, and see a more general interest manifested.

We were much interested in being shown by Mr. H. W. Ripley, now staying at the Semine, some original manuscripts of a hundred years ago. The first was a letter written by Mr. Ripley's great-grandfather, Ebenezer Wheelock, founder and first president of Dartmouth College, at Hanover, N. H. It is dated March 24, 1773, and affords a glimpse of the customs of those days in its quaint acknowledgment of the gift of a panel chisel, and expression of the hope that he might sometime share the use of it with the giver. The second was a letter by Mr. Ripley's grandfather, Prof. Sylvanus Ripley, son-in-law of President Wheelock, and professor of divinity at the college. It is dated Ipswich, Feb. 10, 1774, and relates to his visit to England to raise money for the college, and his success in interesting Lord Dartmouth, who gave $50,000 to the college, and for whom it was named. The third was an agreement relating to the plastering of a house, dated Oct. 8, 1787, and signed by the wife of Prof. Ripley.

Mr. Ripley is the owner and publisher of the newly illustrated "Crawford History of the White Mountains."

a work which his interest in the region described has led him to make a labor of love to get it up in the best possible manner. The book has been highly commended by Senator Geo. F. Hoar, Rev. H. Bernard Carpenter, Benj. Champney, the distinguished Boston artist, and others. Mr. Ripley has taken a deep interest in this section of Florida, and is hard at work with his pen and otherwise to advance its interests. We trust he may meet with the encouragement his efforts deserve, and find a congenial home with us.

THE BLIZZARD.

How dear to my heart is the there, howling blizzard,
Which comes from the North like wolf on the fold!

Predicted by Wiggins, or some other wizard,
The danger of snow and the danger of cold!

How sweet to be caught in its grasp like a feather,
And had yourself wrapped round a telegraph pole!

Oh, how we adore it, this wild winter weather,
This blizzard that comes when you're clear out of cold!

This wild, whirling blizzard, the razor-edged blizzard,
The hard howling blizzard, fresh from the North Pole.

Lincoln Journal.

The above is most respectfully commended to the attention of those who are thinking of leaving the Land of Flowers, and returning to the North soon. Moral: Don't do it!

JOTTINGS.

Mr. Hatchkiss, of Connecticut, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Paul.

A free entertainment was given on the evening of the 15th, at Rollins College.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Benson, of New York City, are visiting Mrs. L. W. Capen.

The Episcopal Church is now deeply engaged in the beautiful services of the Lenten period.

Rev. Dr. Hattfield, of Chicago, was in town on the 13th, having driven over with his friend, Mr. Kinney, from Lake Champlain.

Married, in Winter Park, February 12, 1888, by Rev. T. C. Potter, Ernest Hugh Fay and Miss Laura S. Wingard, all of Winter Park.

There will be an entertainment at the Chapel of Rollins College, on February 20th, at 7:30 p. m., by the students, the proceeds to go towards the furnishing of the gentlemen's reception room in their cottage. It is hoped that it will be largely attended. Admission 25 cents.

Along with other developments, here, we find those visitors who are interested in fishing are becoming enthusiastic over their luck in catching the blue cats and pickers that throng our lakes. We were talking with quite a little crowd of them a day or so ago and we were quite surprised at the large catches reported by all of them. We have known all the time that they were there, but not until lately have the right means been employed for catching them. This is no fish story but a solid fact.

Mr. E. T. Haines, of Haines Bros., is here, ready to push to completion the Orlando and Winter Park Railroad. This firm guarantees the early completion of the Orlando and Lake Jessup Railroad, if the people along the line will tie and grab the route. This is no humbug. Haines Bros. are able to back their guarantee and have a reputation second to no concern in the United States as railroad builders. It is a most important line for Ocala, Lake Champlain, Lake Howell, Ocala, Winter Park and Orlando and they now have a chance to say whether they want it. Do you?

A very interesting occasion was the annual exercises of the Town Improvement Association, on the 14th, at the college chapel. The students of the college were out in force and the exercises consisted of the annual report of the secretary, J. S. Capen; reading by Mrs. Dieffenbaker; instrumental music by Misses Wilke and Gilbert; a fine address by Dr. Allen and a solo on the piano by Miss Garrett. On the conclusion of the exercises the students were dismissed and an effort made to hold the annual meeting and elect officers. It was found that an insufficient number of the members were present to hold the meeting, and it was agreed by those present that the money now on hand be spent for some good public purpose, and the Association be given up. Thus, from want of interest, has passed away an institution that was well calculated to do great good for our community, and had even a little interest been manifested by each of our citizens, we could have had an annual setting out of trees and beautifying the place that in a short time would have made a beautiful showing. But it has been thoroughly tried for a year. Notices for meetings have met with but little or no response and thus a society, founded on a basis on which we could all join, with no political, financial of any other business that could impair its efficiency, insured for want of breath. Requiescat in pace.

Houses for Florida.

A few days since we received the plans of a house from a gentleman who was coming to Florida, intending to build a house, and asking our opinion of the design for both a winter and summer home. While a house built after the plan would be a very pretty and comfortable one for a northern climate, it would be unsuited to Florida. Some people make a serious mistake in having an architect design their house who has never been to Florida, or has very little knowledge about our climate, and hence does not know what we need. He may be a "friend," and the plan cost nothing to speak of, but when the house is completed, and the family spends a few months in it, they will find their plan dear at nothing.

A house in Florida should be built high enough from the ground to prevent the sills ever becoming wet or gathering dampness, with a free circulation of air under the whole building. The sleeping rooms should invariably be on the second floor, but of course opinions differ on this point, and some insist that a sleeping room is much preferable on the first floor. The windows of a sleeping room should be so arranged that they can be opened without a draft over the bed. The hall should be on the west side of the building if possible, as the sun shading for the afternoon against the house would make the rooms very hot and uncomfortable, while a hall would prevent it by furnishing a space between the rooms and outside, through which a current of air is constantly passing. The house should be well supplied with porches, which not only make a pleasant place to rest, but protect the rooms inside from the glare of the sun. The kitchen is better to be separated from the main house by a hall which will keep the smell of cooking viands from penetrating all parts of the house. Look well to ventilation and drainage, and have your outbuildings located some distance from the house. These are a few points to be observed in building for comfort and health in Florida.—Florida Agriculturist.

"If some one could raise a variety of the grape fruit without the bitter melon, it would enhance the value of the fruit immensely. Possibly a hybrid between it and the orange is what is wanted."

We have both. There are sweet rind hybrids between the sweet orange and grape fruit on exhibition at the Sub-Tropical, and a grape fruit without bitter rind is grown in several parts of the State.—Florida Dispatch.

A Notable Occasion.

Thursday evening of last week was a particularly pleasant one at the Rogers House—the occasion being the celebration of the eightieth birthday of one of the guests. This lady, the niece of our president of the United States and the granddaughter of another, herself the bearer of a name of which she is, justly, too proud ever to have cared to change it, has greatly endeared herself to her fellow-guests by her bright, cheery ways and her constant endeavor to make those about her happy, and all heartily united in doing honor to the occasion. A reception was held in the parlor at half-past seven, where the lady received the congratulations of her friends, after which the Rev. Dr. Sterrett, of Fairbank, in a gracefully humorous speech, presented her with an elegant orange-wood cane as an expression of the wish of all present that the way of her declining years might be made easy. This followed a most amusing episode: A large donkey, cut from canvas and a perfect representation of the race (save that, like a certain Manx cat we know, it was tail-less) was fixed upon the wall, and the guests, each having been furnished with a tail, were one by one led up to the beast, blindfolded, and then told to take six steps backward, turn around three times, and return and join the tail to the donkey. As no one could see where he was going and few could keep the position of things in mind, the results were very amusing. The person coming the nearest (of course it was a lady, and of course she "could not see a single thing") was awarded the first prize, a box of candles fresh from Huyler's. The booby prize was won by Mr. E. B. Earle, who had pinned a tail to the wall at a point exactly opposite the donkey and who, upon opening his prize, found himself the possessor of a small but lively turtle. A handsome birthday cake was then brought in, lighted with ten candles, each representing a decade of years. These candles—perhaps as smacking too much of ritualistic practice—were at once fiercely extinguished by the Reverend Chairman, and the cake having been cut by the heroine of the occasion, was almost as quickly made way with. Then, after a half-hour of pleasant converse, the party broke up. We trust that to this notice of the event we may be permitted to append our own congratulations. We wish the lady many happy returns. And we are quite sure (as Lowell has said of Miss Mary Boyle) that "however long she may live, hers can never be that most cheerless of fates, to outlive her friends."
